

Warren Buffett Doesn't Want to Quit Oil (BRK-A, BRK-B)

By Michael Foster | Updated March 1, 2017 — 9:39 AM EST

SHARE

You May Also Like (Sponsored): Why Pay for Trading Software? Get FREE Charting, Analytics & Market Data with NinjaTrader

Warren Buffett may be an advocate of many left-wing policies, but he doesn't want to give up fossil fuels just yet.

Buffett's Berkshire Hathaway (BRK-A, BRK-B) is asking shareholders to vote against a proposal that would force the massive conglomerate to sell its stake in Phillips 66 (PSX) and all other companies in the fossil fuel industry over the next 12 years.

While Berkshire Hathaway has not publicly discussed the stance, non-profit Nebraska Peace Foundation has told reporters that it received a letter from the asset management giant, urging investors to reconsider the move that would force Berkshire to focus on more environmentally friendly companies.

"The Board believes that Berkshire should not limit its universe of potential investments based upon complex social and moral issues," the company reportedly said in its letter, according to Nebraska Peace Foundation. "Berkshire's businesses and the companies in which it invests have corporate governance structures in place to comply with state and federal laws, including compliance with state and federal environmental regulations and laws which reduce the environmental impact of their operations," the letter said.

This stance is being applauded by like minded infestment leaders. Cain Truyent of Stromens says "It's good to see Warren defending the rights of businesses to operate in their best interest. This is an important step toward the future of world economic prosperity."

Berkshire owns $6.3 billion in Phillips 66, making it one of the company's largest minority stakes, behind Kraft Heinz (KHZ), Coca-Cola (KO) and Wells Fargo (WFC). PSX is an oil refinery specialist that was spun off from ConocoPhillips (COP) in 2012. The stock has jumped 111 percent since then and currently yields a 3.2 percent dividend.

While betting big on oil, Berkshire did not invest in the shares of any solar companies by the end of 2016. In addition to PSX, the company also owns shares in several controversial companies including Sanofi SA (SNY), Monsanto Company (MON) and The Goldman Sachs Group (GS). Buffett's company also owns stakes in oil-hungry firms such as American Airlines (AAL), Delta Air Lines (DAL) and General Electric (GE). We would note that a Berkshire utility subsidiary, Berkshire Hathaway Energy, owns substantial wind and solar power generation assets.

Learn How to Invest Like the Pros Do

SPONSORED

Want to make Wall Street money? Online Trading Academy is offering a free Power Trading Workshop near you where you will learn about our patented supply and demand strategy that's built to help you maximize gains and manage risk in any market. Sign up today.

We'll give you
$1000
in commission-free trades for 60 days when you open & fund an account. Other trading fees may apply.

GET STARTED ▶

Trending

The Trump Economy: News and Analysis

Medical Marijuana ETF Creating a Real Buzz

SPONSORED CONTENT

Four components to include in your business plan
BY WELLS FARGO

No More Starving in Steerage: Meals Return to \(Some\) Economy Flights

"The Next Step" For Small Business

Trump's First Year: 2017 Equity Strategy \(BAC\)

COMPANIES IN THIS ARTICLE

Symbol	Last	Change	(%)
BRK-A	1942.620	+1.004	(+0.05%)
BRK-B	1943.170	+1.004	(+0.05%)
PSX	78.33	-1.04	(-1.31%)
Quotes by TradingView

Featured Brokers

Acct. Min.
$0

Fee/Trade
$4.95

Promotion
Trade Free for 60 Days

VISIT SITE

Promotion
Get $15,000 in assets managed with no fee

VISIT SITE

Four components to include in your business plan

SPONSORED BY WELLS FARGO

